Abstract

The present invention refers to a method for treating actinic keratosis by administering a pharmaceutically effective amount of a polyphenol to a patient as well as to the production of a medicament thereto.